Narrative art or illustration?

There are different ways that art can be used to help tell a story. Narrative art is usually a single image which aims to tell a story on its own. This is a traditional form of artwork, and many famous examples tell stories from the Bible or from mythology

Illustration is more usually seen accompanying text. There are many famous examples from children's books. Comic books

Using a storyboard

Comic books and graphic novels are stories told visually, with text secondary in importance to illustrations. They are often presented in storyboard form. A storyboard can also be used by a writer or an artist to help them plan their work.
